TUESDAY EVENING, APRIL 24 1900. MISS WENTWORTH.

Among the stage notes in one of the Washington Sunday papers was the following concerning Miss Estelle Wentworth, who is well known in this

Many an operatic prima donna sang her first notes in public in the seclusion of a church choir. From the church to the stage is not a great step. It has re-mained for M as Estelle Wentworth to make one of the quickest flying leaps on record, from one ex reme to the other. This is how it happened:
Miss Wentworth was the soprano so loist at a prominent Catholic Caurch in this city. She is a beautiful girl, possessing a splendid voice, but until the recent visit of the Bostonians she was apparently content to placidly sing atweek preceding Palm Sunday she spent he days retearing h special church music for the Catholic Church, and her music for the Catholic Church, and her nights at the performances of the Bostonians. On Paim Sunday, when everything was in readiness for the appearance at the church, Miss Wentworth failed to appear. The service consequently suffered, as no substitute could be found in time. The next day, a letter was received from Miss Wentworth, dated New York, stating that she had joined the chorus of the Bostonians, and intended in the future to follow the thorny path of artistic enfollow the thorny path of artistic endeavor leading toward the goal of a prime dones's dressing room.

Miss Wentworth, after only ten days in the chorus, seized her grand opportunity iast Wednesday night at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York, where the Bostonians are singing "The Viceroy." Helen Bestram, toe prima donna, was suddenly taken ill, and, on a few hours' notice, Mes Wentworth went on and sang the principal role of Tivolini, the brigand chief. Judging from the newspaper comments, she sang and acted with great credit. Op-portunities of this nature occur fre quently in the theatrical profession; but it is rather unusual for a young gir! to be a soloist in a Catholic church and au operatic prima douna within the short space of two weeks. Miss Wentworth's career will bear watching.

Many Lives Saved.

In almost every neighborhood there is some one whose life has been saved by Chamberlaia's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœs Remedy, or who has been cured of chronic diarrhœs by the use of that medicine. Such persons make a point of telling of it whenever opportunity offers, noping that it may be the means of saving other lives. For sale by all ornegists.

W. W. Mayhew, Merton, Wis., says, "I consider One Minute Cough Cure a most wonderful medicine, quick and safe." It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate reharmiese remedy that gives immediate re-sults. It cures coughs, colds, croup, bron-chitis, grippe, whooping cough, preumonia and all throat and ang diseases. Its early use prevents consumption. Children always like it and mothers endorse it,
